State Regulations and Licensing

State Licensing for Daycare

To operate a daycare, you need a license from your state. For a home daycare, you'll apply for a "home based" license. States provide orientation programs to assist with the process; contact your Department of Children and Family Services for details. Most home daycares are sole proprietorships, requiring minimal state paperwork.

Additionally, it's crucial to get insurance. Talk to your homeowner's insurance agent about adding daycare coverage to your policy at a low cost.

Get an Aum School License

After meeting state licensing requirements, Aum School will issue a limited license enabling you to use their curriculum. The license fee is 3% of student fees collected. It allows curriculum use for maximum enrolled students at your home.

For additional daycare locations, the license is limited to your home's enrolled students. You must indemnify Aum School and permit inspections per the license terms.

Aum School License Restrictions

No licenses issued within 25 miles of San Antonio, TX, or Charlotte, NC, Aum School locations. Within 7 miles of existing home-based schools, licenses are also restricted.
